This has, in a measure, embarrassed them in their deliberations; but inasmuch as the said draft was before the meeting of Stockholders, and referred to the undersigned, and as they believe such By-Laws are called for, they have concluded to recommend the acceptance of those now submitted, and also for the reason that on referring to the original Charter of this Company, (page 11, 5,) we find a special proviso, that such By-Laws shall be adopted by the Stockholders, as well as by the Managers, as shall be deemed necessary for the general interests of the Company. They also understand, that such principle is embodied in the general railroad law of Pennsylvania, and that it is acted on in the Reading, and other prominent Companies, and although not yet formally adopted in this Company, seems to have been provided for in our Charter.
